DETAILED ACTIONDrawings

The drawings are objected to as failing to comply with 37 CFR 1.84(p)(5) because they include the following reference character(s) not mentioned in the description: Vs. Corrected drawing sheets in compliance with 37 CFR 1.121(d), or amendment to the specification to add the reference character(s) in the description in compliance with 37 CFR 1.121(b) are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. Any amended replacement drawing sheet should include all of the figures appearing on the immediate prior version of the sheet, even if only one figure is being amended. Each drawing sheet submitted after the filing date of an application must be labeled in the top margin as either "Replacement Sheet" or "New Sheet" pursuant to 37 CFR 1.121(d). If the changes are not accepted by the examiner, the applicant will be notified and informed of any required corrective action in the next Office action. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

Specification

The lengthy specification has not been checked to the extent necessary to determine the presence of all possible minor errors. Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which applicant may become aware in the specification.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

Art Unit: 3662

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

Claim 1, 14, and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Nakamura (20020032515).

Referring to claims 1, 14, and 15, Nakamura shows a vehicle external recognition system with a relative position detection section (paragraph 6), a relative velocity calculating section (paragraph 5), a vehicle velocity detecting section (paragraph 54), and a motion attribute discriminating section (paragraph 10-28).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2, 4-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakamura (20020032515) in view of Cameron (6750805).

Referring to claim 2, Nakamura shows a vehicle external recognition system with a relative position detection section (paragraph 6), a relative velocity calculating section (paragraph 5), a vehicle velocity detecting section (paragraph 54), and a motion attribute discriminating section (paragraph 10-28). However Nakamura is silent on the number of calculations of relative velocity that are completed with the number of different initial values that are present.

Cameron shows a plurality of calculations that are completed with the number of different initial values that are present. It would have been obvious to modify Nakamura to have multiple calculations of relative velocity as taught by Cameron because this allows the accuracy of the final value to be increased (Cameron column 2 lines 25-45).

Referring to claim 4, it would be obvious to calculate relative velocity candidates by using identical dynamic characteristics because this allows for the candidates to be comparable, without using identical dynamic characteristics they would not be able to be compared.

Referring to claim 5, Nakamura shows a plurality of initial values that include either one of a value corresponding to a case wherein the detected object is supposed to be preceding vehicle running at the same velocity as the vehicle and a value corresponding to a case wherein the detected object is supposed to be a stationary object (paragraph 15-20).

Referring to claim 6, Nakamura shows a discriminating section that discriminates the motion attribute based on a relative velocity candidate calculated based on the value corresponding to the case wherein the detected object is supposed to be the stationary object (paragraph 15-20).

Referring to claim 7, Nakamura shows a relative velocity determined by the relative velocity determining section is used as a state variable of a running control section that controls a state of the vehicle (paragraph 9 and 18).

Referring to claim 8, Nakamura shows a relative velocity determining section that determines the relative velocity candidate as the relative velocity so as to realize a control characteristic required to the running control section based upon the motion attribute discriminated by the motion attribute discriminating section (paragraph 10-28).

Art Unit: 3662

Referring to claim 9, Nakamura shows a running control section that control a braking force of the vehicle based on the relative velocity determined by the relative velocity determining section (paragraph 60).

Claims 3, and 10-13 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
